Better Late than Never

Those unfortunate enough to call themselves regular readers may have thought they'd escaped an edition in August. It being holiday season, I didn't have much to report on so I thought I'd save it until September. These things are planned you know - it's not just procrastination...

A Fun Time Had by All

Well I've been banging on about it for long enough, so I'm pleased to report that my residential course at the Glenthorne Centre in Grasmere was a joy from start to finish! Even the weather was perfect, and you can't always say that in the Lakes. I will definitely be running another at Glenthorne in 2026 but I'm currently looking out for another venue for 2025. (Glenthorne is so nice, it's already fully booked!) Here's a little photo montage to give you a flavour of the course and you can also read all about it on my Blog.

ART FAIR CHESHIRE

East Cheshire Hospice
Where people come to live

Now I'm back from gadding about in Grasmere it's time to press on with making new work for the East Cheshire Art Fair, which takes place 26th September to 3rd October at Macclesfield Town Hall. This year I've also been asked to do a talk! Aagh! If you'd like to come along it's on Sunday 29th September at 2 pm. I'll be doing a bit of a demo and explaining some of my techniques. Hope you can make it!

I'm all over the place like a rash at the moment. I'm also taking part in this lovely group exhibition, devised and curated by the brilliant (and very busy) Tyra Till. It does exactly what it says on the tin and has been a creative and uplifting experience for all of us who've taken part. There's also a whole programme of mini-events to accompany the exhibition. You can find all the details here.

If seeing all the shenanigans in Grasmere makes you want to have a go yourself, you can sign up for my new Wednesday evening workshop which starts at Artspace on the 9th of October and runs for 5 weeks. I can't promise magnificent Lakeland views but you will come away with your very own four-legged recycled friend

'This was such a good course. I really enjoyed it and learned a lot.'
